How will it differ from Free Realms? I had the great pleasure of interviewing the design lead of Champions Online, John Smith from Turbine. He has been on the team since 2006. He can help us understand the game design issues involved in making the game and make sure Free Realms has a viable successor. Trion Worlds is famous for its great real time strategy game: Dungeons and Dragons Online, as well as the live action series Shattered. Will Champions Online move away from such an intense style and focus on a more casual MMORPG experience? Part of our design philosophy is to build the gameplay around the goal of involving the player in creating the world. The design goal in Champions Online is to build an MMO where players can do a lot of the things that they do in a game like The Legend of Zelda. For example, players will be able to wander around the world with the overworld mode, but also be in a dungeon with a linear path to level up and combat enemies. If you're like me, you are excited about the new cinematic trailer for Champions Online. What can you tell us about the game's visual style? The visual style of Champions Online is inspired by western movies likeThe Matrix. We are very proud of the visual design of the game. We've heard that Champions Online is based on action-oriented MMORPGs from Turbine, in contrast to Free Realms, which is more of a sandbox-style game. What sets Champions apart? Champions Online will be the only game of its kind in that it will have a tense story in it and an epic and dark tone to the game
